The Sky Tells a Story: Venus returns to the evening sky and passes less than a degree south of Jupiter low in the SW on February 17th; look about 20 minutes after sunset to spot the pair. Jupiter is vanishing behind the Sun, but Venus will climb higher in the evening sky for the next several months, to dominate the western evenings. While Jupiter disappears in the south west, opposite him in the NE evening sky is Mars, big and bright and orange red to catch the attention of any novice star gazer. Sirius, the "dog star" in the constellation Canis Major dominates the SE sky by 7 PM, and as it rises, the turbulent winter air causes it to sparkle with shafts of spectral fire. Beautiful as the twinkling appears to the naked eye, for astronomers this means the image is blurry; only in space can we truly see "clearly now". At 8 light years distance, Sirius is the closest star we can easily see with the naked eye from West Florida.
